entered into two years ago."
Political deals and trades are the qualified to render distinguished service large acquaintance throughout the coun A man of sound judgment, wide experience and good executive ability his committee work would be valuable while as an orator he would have few superiors in the House. Mr. Plumley is also in full sympathy with progressive legislation and could be depended on to represent the sentiment of Vermont in he general policies of the present administration. These, in brief, are some of the reasons on which Mr. Plumley's candidacy is based. The News may say incidentally that there appears to be a most cordial sentiment among the voters in favor of holding Col. Haskins to his promise, implied at least, to retire at the end of his present term, when he will have served a longer time in Congress than a larger majority of representatives from at Montpeller Tuesday.
